The sixth trial involved three Bulgarians who decided to flee to Yugoslavia. They got in touch with the Yugoslav embassy in Sofia, which obtained weapons and letters of recommendation (sic) for them. During their attempted flight, one of them was killed and the two others were arrested. The two survivors were each sentenced to 6 months in prison.

Punish Offenders

From 29 June to 3 July of this year, the Plovdiv Regional Court held a trial of a group of agrarians of the dissolved opposition party of the late Nikola Petkov. They were accused of having secretly tried to revive the Agrarian Union for the purpose of overthrowing the existing government. The accused were the following: Dimitur Nanev Kanev, former Plovdiv regional organizer of the Agrarian Union; Yordan Khadzhi Paunov, former member of the union; Ivan Mateev Shalamanov, former member of the regional committee of the Union of Agrarian Youth (of Nikola Petkov); and Rangel Kostadinov Delev, also a member of the union.

The four defendants were accused of having formed an illegal regional administrative committee of the union and of having planned the secret restoration of the party of Nikola Petkov. The group allegedly decided to establish relations with the "imperialists" and the "Titoist Fascists," to organize discontented persons in the villages, to promote the entrance of subversive elements into cooperative farms for the purpose of internal sabotage, and to prepare for armed resistance in the country. All the defendants made the customary "full confessions;" the court sentenced the first two to death and the other two to imprisonment.

During the second half of June, the Vidin Regional Court held a trial of 40 high officials of the Supply Administration accused of having stolen between 1948 and 1950 more than 150 tons of grain, worth 15,000,000 leva, from the state granaries. The 320 witnesses heard by the court confirmed the defendants' crime. Four of the defendants were sentenced to death and the others received prison sentences varying between 2 and 20 years.
